

mechanism to do so with respect to their index option positions.

The Exchange does not believe the proposed rule change will impose any burden on intermarket competition, as it will apply only to index options that are currently listed for trading only on the Exchange (and its affiliated options exchanges).⁶¹ The proposed rule change is intended create a more efficient effective mechanism for market participants to reduce regulatory capital attributable to all index options in their portfolios. The proposal is broader than compression orders, which are limited to SPX options, and the Exchange believes making the compression service available to all index options will provide Market-Makers with additional compression opportunities, which will free up their balance sheets to provide more liquidity in all index options, not just SPX.⁶² When attempting to compress positions, Market-Makers are not seeking price improvement but rather looking to free up capital that will permit them to continue to provide liquidity to the market in their appointed classes, and thus is not intended to have a competitive impact. Because compression transaction information will be disseminated, all market participants will have access to the same information regarding compression transactions as they do to all other transaction information that occurs on the Exchange. The compression service is intended to have a limited purpose, which is to relieve the burden on liquidity providers in the options market by reducing the capital requirements attributable to their open positions. As a result, Market-Makers may be able to increase liquidity they provide to the market, which liquidity benefits all market participants.

Additionally, as noted above, the proposed multilateral compression service is substantially similar to one CME offers for the compression of futures positions.⁶³
