SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION: Under the PRA (44 U.S.C. 3501–3520), Federal agencies must obtain approval from the OMB for each collection of information that they conduct or sponsor.

“Collection of information” is defined in 44 U.S.C. 3502(3) and 5 CFR 1320.3(c) to include agency requests or requirements that members of the public submit reports, keep records, or provide information to a third party. The OCC asks that OMB extend its approval of the information collection in this document.

Abstract: On December 16, 2009, the OCC, FDIC, FRB, and NCUA sought comment on proposed Guidance,¹ which they subsequently issued in final form on August 17, 2010.² The Guidance focuses on the need to provide adequate information to consumers about reverse mortgage products, to provide qualified independent counseling to consumers considering these products, and to avoid potential conflicts of interest. The Guidance also addresses related policies, procedures, internal controls, and third party risk management.

- The information collection requirements contained in the Guidance address the implementation of policies and procedures, training, and program maintenance. Institutions offering reverse mortgages should have written policies and procedures that prohibit the practice of directing a consumer to a particular counseling agency or contacting a counselor on the consumer’s behalf.

- Policies should be clear so that originators do not have an inappropriate incentive to sell other products that appear linked to the granting of a mortgage.

- Legal and compliance reviews should include oversight of compensation programs so that lending personnel are not improperly encouraged to direct consumers to particular products.

- Training should be designed so that relevant lending personnel are able to convey information to consumers about product terms and risks in a timely, accurate, and balanced manner.

On January 28, 2022, the OCC published a 60-day notice for this information collection, 87 FR 4711. The OCC received one comment in response to the notice from a trade association. The commenter referenced the quality, utility, and clarity of the information collected in the context of the guidance itself. However, the commenter made no specific recommendations regarding the information collection. The OCC will consider the suggestions made by the commenter for revising the interagency Guidance in connection with any potential future discussions with the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve and the FDIC.

Comments continue to be invited on:

(a) Whether the collection of information is necessary for the proper performance of the OCC’s functions, including whether the information has practical utility;

(b) The accuracy of the estimates of the burden of the information collection, including the validity of the methodology and assumptions used;

(c) Ways to enhance the quality, utility, and clarity of the information to be collected;
