

appear to most prevent ‘unbanked’ individuals from establishing conventional accounts’; and (2) ‘what is a fair estimate of the size and worth of the “unbanked” market in the United States.’ The National Survey of Unbanked and Underbanked Households is designed to address these factors and provide a factual basis on the proportions of unbanked households. Such a factual basis is necessary to adequately assess banks’ efforts to serve these households as required by the statutory mandate. The National Survey of Unbanked and Underbanked Households is the only population-representative survey conducted at the national level that provides state-level estimates of the size and characteristics of unbanked and underbanked households for all 50 states and the District of Columbia.

The FDIC supplement collects nationally-representative data, not otherwise available, to measure and track economic inclusion, and assess the accessibility and sustainability of banking relationships. The survey identifies different banking status groups, including unbanked and underbanked consumers. In identifying underbanked consumers, the FDIC considers households that have bank accounts but also substantially rely on nonbank financial services to meet basic financial needs such as receiving income, paying bills, saving and storing money, and accessing basic consumer credit. There is an emphasis on services that are disproportionately relied on by the unbanked, and are provided by a company or firm, as opposed to those accessed informally through individuals. The survey captures the use of a range of bank and nonbank products, and other data to help assess the reasons why some households do not make greater use of mainstream banking services.

To obtain this information, the FDIC partners with the U.S. Census Bureau, which administers the Household Survey supplement (“FDIC Supplement”) to households that participate in the CPS. The supplement has been administered every other year since January 2009. The previous survey questionnaires and survey results can be accessed through the following link: <http://www.economicinclusion.gov/surveys/>.

Consistent with the statutory mandate to conduct the surveys on an ongoing basis, the FDIC already has in place arrangements for conducting the sixth Household Survey as a supplement to the June 2019 CPS.

However, prior to finalizing the next survey questionnaire, the FDIC seeks to solicit public comment on whether changes to the existing instrument are desirable and, if so, to what extent. It should be noted that, as a supplement of the CPS survey, the Household Survey needs to adhere to specific parameters that include limits in the length and sensitivity of the questions that can be asked of CPS respondents. Interested members of the public may obtain a copy of the proposed survey questionnaire on the following web page: <https://www.fdic.gov/regulations/laws/federal/2018/2019-draft-household-survey-questionnaire.pdf>.

Comment Discussion

On November 23, 2018, the FDIC requested comment for 60 days on a proposal to renew the National Survey of Unbanked and Underbanked Households information collection.<sup>1</sup> The FDIC received two comments in response to this request. Both commenters were supportive of the survey effort. One did not provide specific suggestions about the survey. The other commenter suggested that the FDIC collect information on the types of activities that consumers conduct at bank branches. The FDIC is interested in better understanding consumers’ use of banking channels, including physical branch locations, and the 2019 survey includes questions on the use of bank tellers and the intensity of branch use. However, the suggested question detailing branch activities was long, with 14 answer options, and would not be feasible to implement given the survey administration methods (it is primarily telephone-based) and survey length constraints. The FDIC will consider how best to learn about consumers’ bank branch activities in future survey administrations and/or other research efforts.

Request for Comment

Comments are again invited on: (a) Whether the collection of information is necessary for the proper performance of the FDIC’s functions, including whether the information has practical utility; (b) the accuracy of the estimates of the burden of the information collection, including the validity of the methodology and assumptions used; (c) ways to enhance the quality, utility, and clarity of the information to be collected; and (d) ways to minimize the burden of the collection of information on respondents, including through the use of automated collection techniques or other forms of information technology. All comments will become a matter of public record.
