

employees to become driver instructors. UPS describes its DTS as a success, as the school has trained hundreds of driver instructors, many of whom did not have previous CDL experience. UPS DTS instructors have, on average, 20 years of UPS experience, hold a CDL of the same (or higher) class and with all endorsements necessary to operate a CMV for which training is provided, have completed the DTS program, have maintained their DTS certification through quarterly additional training, and are employed by UPS as supervisors or managers. The DTS conducts an 8-week program designed to train supervisors and managers in UPS' long-haul operations to deliver driver training to drivers at their "home" worksites. The curriculum covers all the topics set forth in Part 380 Appendix A for the new ELDT rule. The UPS instructor trainees are assessed in progress reviews at days 5, 10, and 15, and a current DTS instructor monitors the quality of the training and trainee progress. According to UPS, the DTS program produces highly qualified driver instructors. Additionally, all UPS driver instructors are required to be recertified every 90 days to demonstrate the same skill level shown for their original DTS certification. UPS further performs internal quality assessments to validate that instructor skillsets are maintained throughout the organization.

UPS requests that it be exempted from the ELDT driver instructor qualification requirements. According to UPS, under the new ELDT regulations no one could be an instructor at the time these regulations go into effect unless he/she had obtained a CDL and had begun driving by February 7, 2018. UPS states that if it must comply with the instructor qualification requirements in the ELDT rule, it would not be able to use 25% of its current certified driver instructors, at minimum. Looking ahead two more years, that number would likely increase to 50% due to its changing workforce. UPS sees an increase in growth through volume demand, as well as an aging workforce that will lead to retiring CDL drivers and certified driver instructors. Without an exemption from the [ELDT] trainer requirements, UPS's inability to use its current driver instructors will impede substantially its ability to meet the demand for new drivers. UPS adds that the exemption is needed to meet Union contractual requirements, as under its collective bargaining agreement with the International Brotherhood of Teamsters (Teamsters), six current UPS employees must be provided with a promotion opportunity for every new hire.

The second part of UPS's application for exemption requests an exemption from the requirement in 49 CFR 380.703(a)(7), to register each training location for a unique Training Provider Registry (TPR) number. According to UPS, training for new drivers takes place in many locations. In each location, instructors who have been trained in the same way pursuant to UPS' DTS program will use a common FMCSR-compliant curriculum developed at a corporate level. UPS's Director of Driver Training is responsible for UPS's firm-wide training program. UPS is operating a single training program in multiple locations. UPS states that it needs this exemption due to the significant administrative burden that would result if it had to register every UPS location at which a new driver could be trained. In addition, having separate TPR numbers for multiple locations offering essentially the same training could create internal confusion for UPS, drivers, and the Agency. UPS new driver training may occur at as many as 1,800 separate locations a year. UPS estimates that the cost to register all of these locations would be substantial, and that it would incur additional costs to keep track of the various registrations, file updates, and new driver registrations.

IV. Method To Ensure an Equivalent or Greater Level of Safety

UPS offers its "train the trainer" program within its DTS to assure an equivalent level of safety. According to UPS, its DTS produces highly skilled instructors who know how to drive tractor-trailers and how to teach others to operate tractor-trailers in a safe manner. UPS believes that graduates of its DTS training program are better prepared to impart knowledge and skills on new drivers than someone who has had two years of driving experience. According to UPS, experience over time has shown that their instructors produce expertly trained, safe entry-level drivers. All DTS certified driver instructors are re-certified every 90 days and UPS conducts periodic (minimum annual) internal quality assessments of the DTS program. In regards to the registration requirements, UPS assures that the registration requirements will be fulfilled by a single registration for UPS' driver training program managed by UPS, if the exemption granted. UPS' requested exemption is for 5 years from the ELDT provisions 49 CFR 380.713 and 49 CFR 380.703(a)(7).
