SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

I. Background

Under section 1034(c) of the Consumer Financial Protection Act (CFPA), consumers have a legal right to obtain information from the approximately 175 largest banks and credit unions in the country with more than $10 billion in assets, as well as from their affiliates.¹ Through this statutory authority, consumers are able to gain valuable insight into their accounts by requesting certain account information from their depository institution.

In the modern banking environment, consumers reasonably expect financial institutions to provide responses to their requests for information and high levels of customer service. Some banks may not be offering the baseline level of customer service that consumers reasonably expect to receive from companies that have control over their money.

Relationship banking is an aspirational model of banking that meets its customers' needs through strong customer service, responsiveness, and care. Relationship banking can play a critical role in helping to foster fair, transparent, and competitive marketplaces.

The CFPB endeavors to help institutions of all sizes foster an inclusive relationship banking model that meets consumers' reasonable expectations of high levels of customer service and enables consumers to hold financial institutions accountable when they encounter problems. This model is especially critical during a time when consumers report wanting and valuing high-quality human interactions in their financial lives, as well as more helpful digital channels to better facilitate self-help.²

Increasing market concentration in the financial services industry may present challenges in implementing an inclusive relationship banking model.³ The number of banking institutions has decreased "from nearly 18,000 in 1984 to fewer than 5,000 in 2021."⁴ Bank consolidation has had mixed results for consumers and customer service experiences.⁵

Of particular note is the loss of local banks in rural communities. Rural customers are more likely to visit smaller banks or credit unions, but face decreased banking access due to "[t]rends in banking consolidation[, which] may be a contributing factor to the prevalence of rural banking deserts."⁶ Rural customers rely on

Of the complaints where the company confirmed a commercial relationship with the consumer and responded with an explanation or relief, in 94% of those complaints, consumers reported that they attempted to resolve their issue with the company before submitting a complaint to the CFPB, indicating that many consumers are unable to resolve their issues through direct contact with their bank.).

smaller banks and the relationship banking they offer, with local knowledge and long-standing relationships, to help maintain the "civic fabric of rural communities."⁷

Federal consumer financial law has long been concerned with consumers' ability to access information. For example, consumers have the right to send a request for information to their mortgage servicer in order to obtain information with respect to their mortgage loan.⁸ In addition, the Fair Credit Reporting Act gives consumers the right to annually request a free copy of their consumer report from each of the nationwide consumer reporting agencies and mandates that consumers receive notice when a user of a consumer report takes any adverse actions on a consumer on the basis, in whole or in part, of information contained in a consumer report.⁹

The CFPA's section 1034(c) right also provides an ability for consumers to access information, as Congress made a determination that consumers need additional rights to demand information from large depository institutions.

II. Request for Comment

This request for information seeks information from the public on what customer service obstacles consumers face in the banking market, and specifically, what information would be helpful for consumers to obtain from depository institutions pursuant to section 1034(c) of the CFPA.

The CFPB welcomes the public to submit stories, data, and information related to this request. To assist commenters in developing responses, the CFPB has crafted the below questions that commenters may answer.

1. What types of information do consumers request from their depository institution? How are consumers using the information?

2. What types of information do consumers request from their depository institution, but are often unable to obtain?

3. How does the channel (phone, in-writing, online, in-person) through which consumers request information impact their ability to obtain information?

4. How do consumers' customer service experiences differ depending on the channel through which they interact with their depository institution (phone, in-writing, online, in-person)?

DATES: Interested persons are invited to submit comments on or before July 21, 2022.

ADDRESSES: You may submit comments, identified by docket number CEQ-2022-0003, by any of the following methods:

- Federal eRulemaking Portal: <https://www.regulations.gov>. Follow the instructions for submitting comments.

- Fax: 202-456-6546.

- Mail: Council on Environmental Quality, 730 Jackson Place NW, Washington, DC 20503.

All submissions received must include the agency name, "Council on Environmental Quality," and the docket number, CEQ-2022-0003. All comments received will be posted without change to <https://www.regulations.gov>, including any personal information provided. Do not submit electronically any information you consider to be private, Confidential Business Information (CBI), or other information, the disclosure of which is restricted by statute.

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION CONTACT: To request additional information about this Information Collection Request, please contact Sharmila L. Murthy at 202-395-5750 or Sharmila.L.Murthy@ceq.eop.gov.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

CEQ previously published this proposed information collection in the Federal Register on March 16, 2022, and allowed 60 days for public comment. 87 FR 14842. CEQ did not receive any public comments. CEQ notes that the total burden hours have changed since the 60-day notice due to a clerical error. The purpose of this notice is to allow an additional 30 days for public comment.

Pursuant to the Paperwork Reduction Act, 44 U.S.C. 3506(c)(2)(A), CEQ is soliciting comments and information to enable it to: (1) evaluate whether the proposed collection of information is necessary for the proper performance of the functions of CEQ, including whether the information will have practical utility; (2) evaluate the accuracy of CEQ's estimate of the burden of the proposed collection of information, including the validity of the methodology and assumptions used; (3) enhance the quality, utility, and clarity of the information to be collected; and (4) minimize the burden of the collection of information on those who are to respond, including through the use of automated collection techniques or other forms of information technology.

Abstract: The information collection activity provides a means to garner qualitative stakeholder feedback in an efficient, timely manner. CEQ envisions using surveys and focus groups to enhance customer service, improve product development, target messaging, ensure quality control, engage with stakeholders, and spur innovation. Information gathered will yield qualitative information; the collections will not be designed or expected to yield statistically representative results, but rather to provide insight about the challenges that subsets of stakeholders face. This feedback will provide insights into stakeholder perceptions, experiences and expectations, provide an understanding of issues with service, or focus attention on areas where communication, training or changes in operations might improve delivery of products or services. These collections will allow for ongoing, collaborative, and actionable communications between CEQ and its stakeholders. It also will allow feedback to contribute directly to the improvement of program management and services. The solicitation of feedback will target areas such as timeliness, appropriateness, accuracy of information, courtesy, efficiency of service delivery, and resolution of issues with service delivery. CEQ will assess responses to plan and inform efforts to improve or maintain the quality of service offered to the public. If this information is not collected, vital feedback from stakeholders on CEQ's services will be unavailable.
