

and economic development throughout the United States.

DOT's updated NTTISP will be complementary to the whole-of-government efforts of the Tourism Policy Council (TPC), led by the Department of Commerce, and its National Tourism Strategy, focusing on challenges and solutions over the immediate and longer term while also addressing DOT's strategic goals of safety, economic strength, climate resilience, equity, and organizational excellence in the transportation sector. DOT is a member of the TPC, which was established by Congress to ensure that the United States' national interest in travel and tourism is fully considered in Federal decision making.

DOT seeks public input to aid in updating the NTTISP. More specifically, it seeks input from the public, including State Departments of Transportation, public and private transportation stakeholders, academia, government, business, and industry groups of all sizes; entities directly performing travel and tourism research and development; and entities directly affected by such research and development.

Persons responding to this RFC are asked to include responses to the following questions in their comments:

1. How can transportation infrastructure better facilitate long-distance travel and tourism?
 - a. For this report, we anticipate long-distance travel and tourism trips to be defined as any trip greater than 50 miles using any mode of transportation or combination of modes of transportation. Is there a better definition for long-distance travel and tourism? Please explain.
 - b. What are the biggest opportunities for transportation infrastructure to support long-distance travel and tourism? Discuss any best practices.
 - c. What issues relating to the national transportation network create significant congestion problems and barriers to long-distance passenger travel and tourism?
 - d. What are best practices related to improving the performance of the national transportation network for long-distance travel and tourism?
 - e. What strategies should be considered to improve intermodal connectivity for long-distance travel and tourism?
 - f. Where and what are the most regionally and nationally significant transportation facilities and corridors for current and forecasted long-distance travel and tourism? Describe these facilities and corridors and explain how they were identified and why they are critical to our nation's long-distance travel and tourism by providing any applicable research or data.

g. What are some of the emerging challenges to long-distance travel and tourism and what actions should the Department and other agencies consider in order to anticipate and mitigate their effects?

2. What statutory, regulatory, technological, institutional, financial, and other barriers should be considered to improve long distance travel and tourism?

3. What policy recommendations should DOT and other agencies consider for using infrastructure investments across all modes of transportation to address the challenges of the travel and tourism industry and the overall travel and tourism economy in the wake of the COVID-19 pandemic?

4. What data sources should DOT consider as it updates the NTTISP?

a. DOT recognizes the challenge of gathering information on trip purpose and long-distance travel. What sources of data and information exist that include trip purpose and long-distance travel?

b. What sources of demographic data and information on origins and destinations of long-distance travelers should DOT consider?

c. What data sources should DOT consider related to the impacts of COVID-19 on long-distance travel and tourism?

5. How can transportation infrastructure policymakers support small, underserved, minority, and rural businesses in the travel and tourism industry?

6. How can policymakers support travelers from underserved communities and improve transportation accessibility?

7. How can policymakers support travel that is sustainable and reduces greenhouse gas emissions?

8. What metrics can help identify scenic, but often less-traveled roads, cruises, and rail corridors that promote tourism and economic development throughout the United States?

9. How should DOT reflect new and future innovations in travel in the NTTISP?

Issued on May 30, 2023.
