

and notified stakeholders via email on March 27, 2014. EPA also added these two sets of data to the docket on March 14, 2014 and with this notice, respectively. Given that EPA has already made these data available through other means, including direct notice to stakeholders, EPA believes that 15 days is an adequate period for public comment on this notice.

In preparing its proposed rule, EPA considered the annual trend of HCFC-22 inventory amounts, and the existing inventory at the end of 2012. Existing HCFC-22 inventory can be used to meet a portion of servicing demand, thus enabling the agency to issue fewer HCFC-22 consumption allowances and prevent additional emissions of ozone-depleting HCFC-22. As noted in the proposed rule, the inventory data collected through EPA's August 2013 letters indicated that HCFC-22 inventory was higher than the agency's previous estimate of 22,700 to 45,400 MT. EPA also noted that several stakeholders expected inventory to rise in 2013 and 2014. While the nine entities do not hold the complete inventory of HCFC-22, discussions with stakeholders both before and after the rule was proposed indicate that the aggregate inventory from these nine entities likely constitutes a significant majority of the HCFC-22 in inventory on the specified dates.

The agency is also announcing revisions to the 2013 Servicing Tail Report, also available in the docket. These changes revise statements regarding alternatives to HCFC-123 for fire suppression and modeled need for virgin HCFC-123 for this purpose.
