

in the public interest. If the information outlined in the HMR and described in this notice is not provided in a special permit request, it is unlikely that a special permit would be issued in the public interest as the application would not be sufficient.

Finally, PHMSA will consider the length of time that the special permit issued in the public interest should remain in effect. New special permits are limited to a maximum of two years in duration by 49 U.S.C. 5117(a)(2). Emergencies—e.g., natural disasters, failure of containment of a hazardous material in transport, etc.—require quick decision-making by PHMSA to mitigate the potential hazards to the public and the environment. Special permits issued in the public interest, such as in the case of emergencies, typically are only issued for an amount of time expected to be sufficient to address the emergency.

VI. Future Actions

This notice serves as guidance for interested parties looking to obtain special permits in the public interest. PHMSA encourages applicants seeking a special permit in the public interest to ensure applications include all necessary information to address the requirements of the HMR as outlined in this notice.

Issued in Washington, DC, on March 7, 2024.
