T cells mediate most forms of cellular immunity. Typically T cells do not respond to free antigenic peptides, but instead T cells interact with a specialized set of cell surface proteins, which are the class I and class II major histocompatibility complexes, or MHC. Specialized antigen-presenting cells, such as macrophage and dendritic cells, present antigenic peptides on the surface cells in conjunction with the MHC molecules, and induce cytotoxic T cells to proliferate. T cells are induced by these antigen-presenting cells to recognize corresponding antigens expressed on MHC antigens on the surface of target cells, and destroy these target cells.

This invention describes a novel method for making transformed dendritic cells with any recombinant nucleic acid, which have been difficult to transduce using existing methods. Recombinant dendritic cells are made by transforming a stem cell and differentiating the stem cell into a dendritic cell. The resulting dendritic cell is an antigen-presenting cell that activates T cells against MHC class I-antigen targets. The present invention provides a valuable tool for the treatment of cancer, and viral and parasitic infections using the recombinant dendritic cells. The invention also provides therapeutic compositions and pharmaceutical compositions.

This research is described in Reeves et al., "Retroviral Transduction of Human Dendritic Cells with a Tumor-Associated Antigen Gene," Cancer Res. 1996 Dec 15, 56(24):5672-5677.
