Project A

Abstract: The Pacific Islands Climate Adaptation Science Center (PI-CASC) involves a partnership between the USGS and a university consortium, including the University of Hawai'i at Mānoa, the University of Hawai'i at Hilo, and the University of Guam. PI-CASC aims to support a portfolio of research projects that foster long-lasting partnerships between researchers, natural and cultural resource stewards and managers, and community leaders. While building local capacities, PI-CASC endeavors to co-develop the science/knowledge bases informing our current understanding of climate change and its impacts, as well as how we might take steps to adapt to those impacts across the Pacific Islands. PI-CASC is seeking to conduct surveys and interviews with project leaders, collaborators, and community members to better understand the state of coproduction across the portfolio and how such cooperative efforts may be improved moving forward. The proposed survey and interviews will collect the following information:

- The state of collaborative relationships between project partners, the community, and others since project completion.
- Status of products developed via PI–CASC funding (e.g., new grant awards, research articles, presentations, workshops, visualization tools, assessments, guidance documents, etc.).
- PI–CASCs influence on approaches taken in other projects.
 The information collected in this effort will be used to improve the approach to developing climate adaptation science/knowledge production and concomitant management/stewardship plans in future PI–CASC work.
