Abstract of Information Available

Human remains representing, at least, 16 individuals have been identified. No associated funerary objects are present. The remains of these 16 individuals were once part of an osteological teaching collection, which included human skeletal elements that had been prepared and used for anatomical instruction sometime between the 19th and 20th centuries. Wesleyan has no records suggesting their geographic origin or acquisition history.

The presence of potentially hazardous substances (i.e., pesticide residues) on these remains is unknown. In 2021, Wesleyan University discovered the presence of pesticide residue (arsenic) on one organic object from Samoa that was transferred from the Smithsonian in the 19th century, as well as several taxidermy specimens. While pesticides were not typically applied to human skeletal remains, they were managed together with organic objects in a large
