

environmental contamination and human health risks if accidentally released or not disposed of properly. This plan attempts to address these remaining risks by: (1) Supporting programs to collect and properly dispose of unwanted pesticides; (2) remediating nonpoint and reservoir sources like sediments, contaminated industrial sites, agricultural chemical dealer/storage sites, and past use sites on a priority basis; (3) reducing human exposure through public education, fish consumption advisories, and other outreach activities; (4) working with foreign governments to reduce or phase-out production and use of these substances, thereby reducing the risks from long-range transport; and (5) continued monitoring for environmental levels in fish, wildlife, and humans.

EPA considers stakeholder involvement essential to reaching the goals of the PBT Strategy. EPA is seeking stakeholder input and invites comment on this draft National Action Plan on the following topics and issues related to the PBT Level 1 pesticides:

1. Quantities of domestic unused stocks of pesticide products.
2. Historical trends or current soil residues (urban and agricultural).
3. Information on sites with significant Level 1 pesticide contamination.
4. Current indoor levels of pesticides used in residents.
5. Alternative disposal and soil/sediment remediation methods, and performance information.
6. Other sensitive or highly exposed human subpopulations.
7. Meaningful and feasible ways to address the problem of canceled pesticides in the environment.
8. Meaningful PBT goals, performance measures, and time frames for such accomplishments.
