Regulatory History

On March 25, 1999, the Coast Guard published a notice of proposed rulemaking (NPRM) entitled "Anchorage Ground; Safety Zone; Speed Limit; Tongass Narrows and Ketchikan, AK" in the Federal Register (64 FR 14414). On June 2, 1999, the Coast Guard published an interim rule in the Federal Register (64 FR 29554). A correction was issued on June 15, 1999 in the Federal Register (64 FR 32103).

On April 7, 2000, the Coast Guard published a second interim rule entitled "Anchorage Ground; Safety Zone; Speed Limit; Tongass Narrows and Ketchikan, AK" in the Federal Register (65 FR 18242). The comment period for this interim rule ended on October 31, 2000.

Background and Purpose

The Interim Rule published in 1999 extended the seven-knot speed limit on Tongass Narrows northward to Tongass Narrows Buoy 9 in order to address the needs of floatplane traffic. Non-commercial open skiffs were exempt from the seven-knot speed limit to allow them to transit crowded areas of Tongass Narrows more quickly, thereby relieving congestion.

The Interim Rule also re-designated a safety zone in Ketchikan Harbor as an anchorage. Vessels transiting the anchorage other than those engaged in anchoring evolutions are required to proceed through the anchorage by the most direct route without delay or sudden course changes. The re-designation of the area reflected its actual use as an anchorage for large passenger vessels. The slow or erratic operation of small vessels in the former safety zone made it very difficult for large vessels to safely maneuver to and from anchor. The requirement that transiting vessels proceed through the anchorage directly, without delay or sudden course changes, made the final approach, anchoring, and departure of large passenger vessels, safer for the vessels involved.

In April, 2000, a second Interim Rule was published addressing concerns from the public. The Coast Guard revised the exemption to the seven-knot speed limit to include all small vessels of 23 feet or less, registered length. This change allowed an increased number of small vessels that create little wake to transit crowded areas of Tongass Narrows more quickly, thereby relieving congestion.

Reopening the Comment Period

The comment period for the interim rule published in April 2000 ended October 31, 2000. In order to give the public a chance to make additional comments, the Coast Guard is reopening the comment period for this interim rule, prior to publishing a final rule. All comments must reach the public docket at the address found in ADDRESSES on or before December 22, 2003.
