

mobilize, deploy, fight, and win anywhere in the world. Army training conditions must match or closely resemble all possible environments throughout the world, including arctic and subarctic conditions. In addition to the Army's use of the withdrawn land, the U.S. Air Force plans, conducts, and coordinates air operations in the restricted airspace over the withdrawn land.

The Draft LEIS evaluates the reasonably foreseeable effects of multiple alternatives. The alternatives considered include: (1) requesting that Congress extend the land withdrawal for 25 years or more until such time as the Army determines it no longer needs the land for military purposes; and (2) a No-Action Alternative, under which the withdrawal would not be extended. Besides the first alternative above, there are no reasonable alternatives capable of meeting the project's purpose and need.

Resource areas and impacts analyzed in the Draft LEIS include, but are not limited to, the following: recreational uses of the withdrawn land; subsistence uses; air quality; noise; soil; water quality; biological resources; socioeconomic; public health and safety; archaeological sites and districts; traffic and transportation; land use; airspace; and hazardous materials. The Draft LEIS also identifies measures that would reduce or eliminate adverse impacts. BLM's findings regarding potential impacts on subsistence uses will—consistent with the requirements of section 810 of the Alaska National Interest Lands Conservation Act—be appended to the Draft LEIS. The Army coordinated with federal, state, and Tribal entities during development of the LEIS, including the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service and BLM.

The No-Action Alternative could have significant economic impacts on the cities of Delta Junction and Fairbanks. Under the Proposed Action, there would be no change to training activities. The Draft LEIS identified ongoing, potential, moderate and minor adverse impacts on biological resources, cultural resources, water resources, air quality, and hazardous material levels resulting from the Proposed Action. The Army does not anticipate the Proposed Action causing any significant impacts.

The Army announced the release of the Draft LEIS through local media outlets, beginning a public comment period during which public meetings will be held in Delta Junction and Fairbanks. Pursuant to section 810(b) of the Alaska National Interest Lands Conservation Act (Pub. L. 96–487, title 16, section 3120, United States Code), the public meeting in Delta Junction will also serve as a public hearing on BLM's finding of potential impacts on subsistence uses. Following the 60-day public comment period, the Army will consider all comments and append them to the Draft LEIS for inclusion in the legislative proposal. Under title 40, part 1506, CFR, a Final EIS is not required in the LEIS process, and the Army will not prepare a Final EIS for this Proposed Action.

Federal, state, and local agencies, Alaska Native Tribes, Alaska Native Tribal organizations, and the general public are invited to participate in a public meeting and/or submit written comments. Written comments must be received within 60 days of publication of this Notice of Availability in the Federal Register. Public meetings will be held in a virtual environment, in person, or both. Dates and times will be advertised in local newspapers and will be posted online at: <https://home.army.mil/alaska/index.php/fort-wainwright/NEPA>.
