

additional facts about the remanufacturer. Specifically, FDA stated:

FDA, however, does believe that representations concerning the OEM may be misleading unless the reprocessor of a single use device provides additional information that would indicate that the reprocessor is the manufacturer responsible for product problems. As you note in your petition, hospitals and other user facilities must alert FDA or the manufacturer whenever there is information that "reasonably suggests that a device has or may have caused or contributed to the death ... [or] serious injury to a patient ..." 21 CFR 803.30(a). Moreover, the user or FDA may need to know the identity of the manufacturer, not only for the purposes of reporting adverse events to FDA, but to assure that the responsible manufacturer or FDA can investigate the problem to determine if additional steps should be taken, including distribution of safety information to the users, or product recalls. Accordingly, FDA believes that when a reprocessed product's labeling makes representations that suggest the OEM should be notified of product problems, additional information that provides the correct identity of the reprocessor as the remanufacturer who is responsible for adverse event reporting, recalls, or other corrective actions, is "material" information within the meaning of section 201(n) of the Act because such information is necessary to enable FDA's postmarket reporting procedures under section 519 of the Act to function effectively.

In the response to the petition, FDA also said that it would publish a guidance document that will recommend more specific language and direction to regulated industry on this matter. Before it develops this guidance document, FDA is inviting interested persons to submit comments and suggestions on the contents of such a guidance.

The ADDM petition and FDA's response are available from the Dockets Management Branch (address above). Please reference Docket No. 01P-0148.
