The Division oversees and provides technical assistance to the state-administered domestic assistance programs and Wilson/Fish projects. The Division works closely with each state in designing a resettlement program specific to the needs of incoming populations. The Division develops guidance and procedures for their implementation and manages special initiatives to increase refugee self-sufficiency, such as through state-funded discretionary grants or pilot programs. The Division assists in coordinating and planning refugee support services among public and private agencies and supports the flow of information on refugee profiles and community resources in support of effective placement at the state and local levels. The Division of Refugee Children Services provides oversight of foster care placement and services to unaccompanied refugee minors and other special populations of youth in the United States. The Division has two primary components: (1) the Unaccompanied Refugee Minors (URM) Program, which focuses on the safety, education, well-being, permanency, and self-sufficiency of youth in foster care, and (2) coordination of services through technical assistance and capacity building across ORR programs with a child-protection lens to ensure the safety and well-being of children and youth as they navigate the refugee resettlement and integration process. The Division oversees the work of the URM Program, working closely with states to ensure sufficient capacity to serve all URM-eligible populations.
