The 2 GHz mobile satellite service (MSS) rules are contained in 47 CFR part 25 of the Federal Communications Commission's ("Commission") rules. If planned post-mission disposal involves atmospheric re-entry of spacecraft, 2 GHz MSS licensees are required to disclose such information in the form of a narrative statement, through amendments to applications or letters of intent, or orbital debris mitigation design and operational strategies. Additionally, the rules require that 2 GHz MSS licensees submit a casualty risk assessment to the Commission. This requirement permits the Commission and the public to comment on each system's design. Two GHz mobile satellite systems receiving expansion spectrum as part of the rural and unserved areas spectrum incentive must provide a report on the actual number of subscriber minutes originating or terminating in unserved areas as a percentage of the actual U.S. system use. This rule permits the Commission to verify that service is being provided in rural unserved areas. In addition, system proponents will have to complete critical design review (CDR) within two years of authorization. CDR is a milestone for satellite services and permits the Commission to more closely monitor system construction. Without such information, the Commission could not determine whether satellite licensees are operating in conformance with the Commission's rules.

On February 5, 2003, the Federal Communications Commission ("Commission") released a Report and Order (R&O) and Notice of Proposed Rulemaking (NPRM), in IB Docket Nos. 01-185 and 02-364, FCC 03-15. The R&O permitted Mobile Satellite Service (MSS) providers to integrate ancillary terrestrial components (ATCs) into their MSS networks. The benefits of MSS providers integrating ATCs into their MSS networks are to: (1) Increase the efficiency of spectrum use through MSS network integration and terrestrial reuse and permit better coverage in areas that MSS providers could not otherwise serve; (2) reduce costs, eliminate inefficiencies and enhance operational ability in MSS systems; (3) provide additional communications that may enhance public protection; and (4) strengthen competition in the markets served by MSS.

The decisions adopted in the R&O resulted in the implementation of information collection requirements that are necessary to facilitate the Commission's rules addressed in Parts 2 and 25. The purposes of the information collection are for the Commission to
