Abstract of Information Available

In support of mitigation activities carried out near Launch Facility-04 for the Sentinel Test Program, the Department of the Air Force, Vandenberg Space Force Base conducted data recovery excavations at archaeological site CA–SBA–512, the ethnohistoric Chumash village of Lospe between October 2021 and June 2023. At Locus 2, which has been identified as an ancient shell mound, four test excavation units and 18 shovel test pits were excavated. Two of the test units encountered human remains. The human remains were left in place in the test units in accordance with the project's NAGPRA Plan of Action.

After consultation with the Tribe, consideration of tribal traditional knowledge regarding shell mound funerary practices, and further analysis of the collection, it has been determined that the artifacts from the other two test units and all 18 shovel test pits excavated in the shell mound should be considered unassociated funerary items under NAGPRA. These excavations contained fragments of bone hair pins, fishhooks, shell beads, steatite beads, obsidian and chert projectile points, and burned or broken milling implements which could be associated with burials at that location that have since disintegrated, were removed historically, or were not intersected by the recent excavations. Native American shell mounds found along the California coast such as this one are known for containing human burials, and while no human remains were found, artifacts suggestive of human interments are present in the shell mound. Based on the information available from two spatially separate test excavation units, human remains representing at least two individuals have been reasonably identified at the shell mound. A total of 1,063 associated funerary objects were identified in the two excavation units which had human remains, including flaked and ground stone tools, debitage, shell beads, pendants and fishhooks, ground and polished stone, and faunal remains. A total of 2,595 unassociated funerary objects were identified in the other two units and 18 shovel test pits, again including flaked and ground stone tools, debitage, shell beads, pendants and fishhooks, ground and polished stone, and faunal remains. No objects of cultural patrimony or sacred objects were identified.

Determinations

The Department of the Air Force, Vandenberg Space Force Base has determined that:

- The human remains described in this notice represent the physical remains of at least two individuals of Native American ancestry encountered in the shell mound.

- The 1,063 objects described in this notice are reasonably believed to have been placed intentionally with or near individual human remains at the time of death or later as part of the death rite or ceremony.

- The 2,595 unassociated funerary objects described in this notice are reasonably believed to have been placed intentionally with or near human remains, and are connected, either at the time of death or later as part of the death rite or ceremony of a Native American culture according to Native American traditional knowledge. The unassociated funerary objects have been identified by a preponderance of the evidence as related to human remains, specific individuals, or families with cultural affiliation to the Chumash.

- The Santa Ynez Band of Chumash Mission Indians of the Santa Ynez Reservation, California has priority for disposition of the human remains and cultural items described in this notice.

If competing claims for disposition are received, the Department of the Air Force, Vandenberg Space Force Base must determine the most appropriate claimant prior to disposition. Requests for joint disposition of the human remains and cultural items are considered a single request and not competing requests.
