

can influence levels of substances in the home such as volatile organic compounds (VOCs), more study sites in different geographic locations will help scientists understand if these relationships hold in different climates and housing stock. This ongoing study provides a foundation to explore the potential for green affordable housing to promote healthy homes principles. This will be accomplished by gathering data from a total of thirteen study sites across the United States.

Study participants will continue to include children with asthma and their mothers/primary caregivers living in HUD-subsidized housing that has either been scheduled to receive a green renovation or is a comparison home

(i.e., no renovation). The following are eligible for the study: (1) Children age 7–12 years with asthma and (2) mothers/primary caregivers. The length of follow-up is one year. Questionnaires regarding home characteristics and respiratory symptoms of the children will be administered at 1- to 6-month intervals. Environmental sampling of the air and dust in the respondents' homes will be conducted over a 1-year period: Once in the home before rehabilitation (Baseline), and then at three time points after rehabilitation has been completed (Baseline Part 2, 6 months, and 12 months).

The response rate from enrollment through the end of data collection for the first two study sites was 82%. The expected response rate for the overall study is 80%. To reach the desired number of respondents approximately 1,000 adults (mothers/primary caregivers) will need to complete the screening forms. Approximately 832 mothers/primary caregivers of enrolled children will complete the questionnaires. All health and environmental exposure information about children will be provided by their mothers/primary caregivers (i.e., no children will fill out questionnaires).

There is no cost to the respondents other than their time to participate in the study. The total estimated annual burden hours equals 2,356.
