Proposed Project

Intimate Partner Violence (IPV) National Media Campaign—Choose Respect—Renewal—National Center for Injury Prevention and Control (NCIPC), Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC).

Background and Brief Description

Intimate partner and sexual violence is a significant problem in the United States. According to the National Violence against Women Survey, an intimate partner physically assaults or rapes approximately 1.5 million women and 850,000 men in the United States each year. Many more individuals are subjected to threats of violence and psychological and emotional abuse. Alarming, intimate partner violence (IPV) behaviors are manifested in youth populations. The literature suggests that attitudes and behaviors can be shaped and reinforced more easily and more effectively as individuals are developing in youth than after they have been firmly established. To begin to address IPV and sexual violence in youth populations, the CDC's NCIPC has developed a media campaign entitled, "Choose Respect." The campaign targets prevailing norms that support victimization and perpetration of violence against women. Because attitudes and behaviors related to IPV begin to manifest early on, CDC will focus its efforts on early adolescents, and on the people who influence them.

This project will implement and evaluate the Choose Respect Campaign in a national roll-out in twelve states: Arizona, California, Connecticut, Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Minnesota, New York, North Carolina, Texas, Washington, and Washington D.C. The campaign will target youth as the primary audience and parents and teachers as secondary audiences. A
