Abstract: The Brady Handgun Violence Prevention Act of 1993 required the United States Attorney General to establish a National Instant Criminal Background Check System that any federal firearms licensee (FFL) may contact, by telephone or other electronic means, for information to be supplied immediately on whether receipt of a firearm by a prospective purchaser would violate State or Federal law. Information pertaining to FFLs who may contact the NICS is being collected to manage and control access to the NICS and to the NICS Electronic (E-Check), to ensure appropriate resources are available to support the NICS, and also to ensure the privacy and security of NICS information. More information can be obtained at <https://www.fbi.gov/services/cjis/nics>. The proposed 2025 revision to the form captures four new fields. The first two fields ask for the FFL's date of birth and mother's maiden name for security measures. An additional question is asked if an FFL operates in a point of contact (POC) state. If the FFL answers in the affirmative, the FFL is asked to initial to acknowledge use of the FBI NICS for authorized purposes only so they may avail themselves of the additional resources for FFLs from POC states as they become available.

Abstract: The Office on Violence Against Women (OVW)’s formula and discretionary grant programs were authorized through the Violence Against Women Act of 1994 (VAWA) and subsequent legislation, including VAWA reauthorizations in 2000, 2005, 2013 and 2022. The four formula programs are STOP (Services, Training, Officers, Prosecutors), SASP (Sexual Assault Services Program), State Coalitions, and Tribal Coalitions. Funding under OVW’s two largest formula grant programs—the STOP and SASP Programs—is distributed to states and territories according to a statutory formula. The STOP and SASP Administrators in each state and territory then make subgrants to organizations within their states and territories. OVW posts notices of funding opportunities for each discretionary program every fiscal year and, after a competitive application review process, makes awards directly to local, state, and Tribal governments, courts, non-profit organizations, community-based organizations, secondary schools, institutions of higher education, state and Tribal coalitions and any other organizations authorized to receive funding under the different grant programs. OVW grants help develop effective responses to violence against women through activities that include direct services, crisis intervention, transitional housing, legal assistance to survivors, court improvement, and training for law enforcement and courts. OVW determines grantee performance measures and reporting requirements for each grant program based on the authorizing statute and what is necessary for monitoring the awards. The questions on each grant program’s performance report form address the different types of permissible grant-funded activities as outlined in the purpose areas in each program’s authorizing statute.

Currently, OVW uses up to 19 individual OMB-approved PDF forms to collect performance and monitoring data from grantees. These forms each collect slightly different data points and may use different questions to collect information about the same activities. OVW is submitting this new information collection request to consolidate existing and previously OMB-approved OVW information collections under a single collection with a new consolidated OMB number. This “new” collection would simply aggregate and streamline the performance reporting process covered by the 19 approved collections. This request leverages technology to streamline, modernize, and reduce paperwork.
