SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

SARS-CoV-2 Infection of Human Lung Epithelial Cells Triggers a Cell-Mediated Acute Fibrin Fibrosis

Description of Technology

Scientists at National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases (NIAID) have developed a method of treatment for virus-induced lung fibrosis using nebulized thrombin inhibitors. Since March 2020, the World Health Organization (WHO) estimates that 564 million people have been infected with SARS-CoV-2 world-wide. Lung fibrosis is a major factor associated with SARS-CoV-2 infections and can contribute to mortality. Additionally, severe SARS-CoV-2 cases can result in long-term pulmonary disease due to lung fibrosis. At present, attempts to treat lung fibrosis developed during a SARS-CoV-2 infection using intravenous heparin have been unsuccessful.

NIAID scientists have discovered a previously unknown acute fibrosis mechanism mediated by SARS-CoV-2 infected primary lung epithelium, and have developed an innovative method of treating lung fibrosis using nebulized thrombin inhibitors.

This technology is available for licensing for commercial development in accordance with 35 U.S.C. 209 and 37 CFR part 404, as well as for further development and evaluation under a research collaboration.

Potential Commercial Applications

- Innovative method of treatment for virus-induced lung fibrosis
- A multi-targeted approach could decrease lung-term symptoms associated with SARS-CoV-2

Competitive Advantages

- Addresses the pathology at the proper location instead of indiscriminately

Development Stage

- Pre-Clinical
