

needed to achieve increasing water quality and public health goals.

Adoption of the Management Guidelines is voluntary, however, EPA encourages states and communities to consider them as a basis for improving their onsite and clustered wastewater management program.

The guidelines apply to both existing communities and to areas of new development that use onsite and clustered wastewater treatment systems of any size for residential and commercial wastewater treatment and dispersal.

Background. Onsite and clustered wastewater treatment systems currently serve about 25 percent of U.S. homes and approximately 33 percent of new development. States report that these wastewater treatment systems have failed because of inappropriate siting or design or inadequate long-term maintenance and that septic tank systems constitute the third most common source of ground water contamination.

In April, 1997, EPA prepared its Response to Congress on the Use of Decentralized Wastewater Treatment Systems. The report concluded that decentralized wastewater treatment technologies offer a cost-effective, long term wastewater solution for many communities. However, the report emphasized that decentralized technologies must be implemented in the context of a responsible management program to consistently achieve water quality and public health goals. The report identified the current lack of management as a barrier to successfully applying these otherwise promising technologies.

In response to the need for improved management, EPA prepared a concept paper in the spring of 1999, which received considerable input from various stakeholders, including other federal agencies, state health agencies, environmental groups, trade associations and public interest groups. The result was a notice of availability of the draft Guidelines for Management of Onsite/Decentralized Wastewater Treatment Systems which was published in the Federal Register on October 6, 2000 (65 FR 59840–59841) for public comment and included an annotated outline of an accompanying manual/handbook. During follow up outreach efforts conducted by EPA, stakeholders raised several key issues concerning the voluntary nature of the Guidelines, their flexibility, and possible implementation issues. EPA has addressed those issues and has received support from representatives of public and private organizations who believe national guidelines are important.

I. General Information

A. Introduction

1. By the Auction No. 50 Procedures Public Notice, the Wireless Telecommunications Bureau ("Bureau") announces the procedures and minimum opening bids for the upcoming Narrowband PCS Spectrum Auction (Auction No. 50). The Bureau also announces a new date for the start of Auction 50 and a revised license inventory.

2. On November 26, 2002, in accordance with the Balanced Budget Act of 1997, the Bureau released a public notice seeking comment on reserve prices or minimum opening bids and auction procedures to be used in the Narrowband PCS Spectrum Auction (Auction No. 50). The Auction No. 50 Comment Public Notice, 67 FR 72417 (December 5, 2002), announced that Auction No. 50 would include regional and MTA licenses. The Bureau received one comment in response to the Auction No. 50 Comment Public Notice. No reply comments were submitted.

3. Space Data proposed that the Commission adopt a combinatorial bidding scheme for Auction No. 50. Space Data contends that the regional licenses are uniquely complementary, because in combination, they effectively constitute a nationwide license and will be more highly valued as a combined package by prospective auction participants intending to deploy nationwide service.

4. After consideration of Space Data's comments, the Bureau has concluded that it may be appropriate to use package bidding for the auction of the regional licenses. Accordingly, by this public notice the Commission:

i. Revises the license inventory for Auction No. 50 by removing the regional narrowband PCS licenses from Auction No. 50. Auction No. 50 will include only the MTA licenses.

ii. Revises the starting date for Auction No. 50, which will commence on September 24, 2003.

5. The Bureau notes that the regional narrowband PCS licenses will be included in Auction No. 51. It will announce the dates for Auction No. 51 and seek comment on a package bidding auction design and other auction procedures in a public notice.
