

Request for Exemption

Under 49 CFR 172.800–804, administered by PHMSA, carriers of certain security-sensitive HM must develop special plans that account for personnel, cargo, and en route security. Although not mandatory, “constant attendance” of the cargo is included by most carriers in their security plans.

“Constant attendance” on a CMV is considered “on duty time,” as defined in 49 CFR 395.2. However, CMV drivers are subject to rest break requirements in Section 395.3(a)(3)(ii), which prohibit them from driving a CMV if more than 8 consecutive hours have passed since the driver’s last off-duty or sleeper-berth period of 30 minutes or more. Drivers who are required by their carrier’s HM security plan to maintain constant on-duty attendance on the CMV whenever stopped, cannot also comply with the off-duty rest break requirement of Section 395.3(a)(3)(ii).

Section 397.5 requires drivers transporting cargo classified as Division 1.1, 1.2, or 1.3 (explosive) materials to attend the cargo at all times. There is no regulatory conflict for these drivers, however, because Section 395.1(q) specifically allows them to count up to 30 minutes of their on-duty attendance time toward the rest break requirement, provided that they perform no other on-duty activities during that period.

ATA initially asked FMCSA “to clarify that drivers can exercise constant attendance over a vehicle without having to remain on duty.” After discussion with Agency officials, however, ATA agreed that its request should be treated as an exemption application. All correspondence on this issue has been placed in the docket listed at the beginning of this notice. The exemption request has been filed on behalf of all carriers whose drivers transport HM loads requiring placarding under 49 CFR part 172, subpart F, or select agents and toxins identified in Section 172.800(b)(13) that do not require placarding, and who have filed security plans requiring constant attendance of HM in accordance with Sections 172.800–804. The HM load being transported would not itself have to come under the provisions of Sections 172.800–804, because it would be too difficult for drivers and enforcement officials to determine at roadside whether Sections 172.800–804 applied to any individual load. Only drivers operating under the authority of carriers that have filed security plans under Sections 172.800–804 and who are transporting loads that require placarding or contain a select agent or toxin identified in Section 172.800(b)(13) would be eligible for this exemption. Drivers operating under this exemption could count up to 30 minutes of their on-duty attendance time toward a required rest break, provided that they perform no other on-duty activities during the rest-break period.

The driver would be required to annotate the record of duty status (“log book”) to show the time claimed as a rest break was on-duty time because he/she was required to follow the carrier’s security plan, which in turn required “attendance” on an HM load.

It should be noted that a carrier or driver would have no reason to claim to be operating under this exemption unless it was necessary to do so to avoid a regulatory conflict. While under the exemption, if granted, the driver’s rest-break time would be on-duty and count against the 60 or 70-hour on-duty limit. A rest break taken without using this exemption would be off-duty and not be included in the 60/70 hour limit.

ATA contends that allowing these drivers to count up to 30 minutes of their attendance time toward a required rest break, provided they perform no other on-duty activities during the break, would likely achieve a level of safety equivalent to, or greater than, the level that would be achieved by the current regulation because the attendance duty would be unlikely to contribute to driver fatigue. ATA further contends that allowing these drivers to count up to 30 minutes of their attendance time toward a required rest break would provide security benefits superior to the current practices.

Request for Comments

In accordance with 49 U.S.C. 31315(b)(4) and 31136(e), FMCSA requests public comment on ATA’s application for an exemption from the rest-break requirements of Section 395.3(a)(3)(ii). The Agency will consider all comments received by close of business on June 1, 2015.

Comments will be available for examination in the docket at the location listed under the ADDRESSES section of this notice. To the extent practicable, the Agency will consider comments received in the public docket after the closing date of the comment period.
